Saving Your Surplus

In these days of high prices, the average wage-earner has little left of the pay check after meeting necessary expenses.

By foregoing some small luxury here and there, it is possible to save something each pay day. Even if it is only $5—that $5 placed in our Savings Department will begin to earn interest (at the rate of 3% per annum) from the very moment it is placed on deposit. If an additional $5 is added each pay day, at the end of the year quite a snug little sum will have been laid by.

BRAZIL IS DRESSING UP TO RECEIVE KING ALBERT

Belgian Royal Family Will Make Trip on Dreadnaught
Sao Paulo.

RIO DE JANEIRO, August 30.—Elaborate preparations are being made to receive and entertain the King and Queen of Belgium when they arrive here on the Brazilian dreadnaught Sao Paulo to repay the visit of President Pessoa to Belgium last year. Commodious quarters, handsomely furnished and decorated, were built on the Sao Paulo to accommodate the royal party, which will consist of ten persons.

En route to Brazil calls will be made at St. Vincent and Las Palmas. An orchestra of five specially chosen musicians is aboard the Sao Paulo to provide music for the royal guests during the voyage. A selected library, dealing mainly with Brazilian history, installed in their quarters, will enable the party to become acquainted with the land they are to visit.

The visitors' stay in Brazil will be filled with receptions, entertainments and sight-seeing tours. Guanabara Palace, where the royal family will be housed while in Rio, was formerly the home of the Princess Isabel during the late imperial regime. It was here also, where the late Col. Roosevelt was installed when he came to Brazil and made his adventurous trip to the Amazon country. The palace is a spacious building, located in a quiet, beautiful section of the city. Two rows of stately palms lead from the palace to Guanabara bay, a mile distant. For months the building has been in the hands of workmen and decorators and now is ready to receive its royal guests.

New illumination schemes are being installed in the principal avenues, new boulevards are being constructed along the sea and city improvements generally are being hastened so that the city will present the best possible appearance when the Belgians arrive. Plans for an elaborate Venetian fête on the bay are being considered. To meet the expenses connected with these improvements and for the entertainment of the Belgians, the government has asked congress for unlimited credit.

"TREAT 'EM ROUGH" TACTICS NOT IN HARDING'S MAKE-UP

Republican Presidential Nominee Aims to Be Conciliator Both in Business and Politics.

BY HERBERT COREY.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, August 20.—There are enemies of Warren G. Harding in the republican ranks in Ohio—a few—and a good many men who do not like him. The fact is rather puzzling at first glance, for there is one man in politics who has never been charged with saying anything unkind or unfair to his opponents he is W. G. H. His desire has always been to be a conciliator. In politics, as in business, his line of action is invariably when misunderstanding arises.

"Let's sit down about a table and thresh this out. It is difficult for men to refuse to reach an understanding when they meet face to face."

His Own Newspaper Silent.

He carries his desire to be absolutely fair in politics "too darn far," his friends say, except that they place more decided emphasis on the qualifying word. The Marion Star has never carried a word editorially in commendation of its owner when he was a candidate for office, nor an unpleasant word against his opponent. Even at the present time it was all his friends could do to gain his consent to have the Star pay a proper amount of attention to his interests in the news columns.

"You are out of the Star now, W. G.," they have said to him. "Why not carry a little box at the top of the editorial column, announcing that fact and making Van Fleet responsible for the editorial column?"

"No," was Harding's decision. "That seems to me to be cowardly."

Defeated by Hanna Men.

Most of the animosity to Harding which is still to be found in Ohio probably dates back to the Hanna campaign for the United States Senate. Joseph E. Foraker, then senator from Ohio, ranked his forces in opposition to Hanna. The factional fight that ensued has never been bettered for sheer bitterness in this state. The partisans felt an acid hate for their opponents. Nor were the methods employed notable either in ethics or law.

Hanna had organized the lower house, and Harding aided the Foraker forces in organizing the senate. In his younger days he was an attorney to a judicial police which does not lack a touch of cynicism. During James G. Blaine's activities on the political border Harding was ever ready to ride. Foraker succeeded Blaine in his affections. It is true that Harding refrained from harsh words or measures in this fight. He probably never called a man a liar in his life—or called any man anything else unpleasant. He is innately opposed to table-hitting and yelling. But the force with which he expressed his convictions made him detested by the Hanna men.

Withdrew From Race. Later, he became lieutenant governor under Myron T. Herrick. Opposition was manifested to Herrick's renomination, and at the instance of Senator Foraker, who had not forgiven Herrick for the part he played in winning Hanna's victory, Harding consented to make the fight for the gubernatorial nomination. But this was on one condition.

"I will enter this fight only if you get the organization," he told Foraker.

Senator Foraker agreed, but later declared himself too busy to touch the situation. The Herrick-Hanna men were in control as Foraker no doubt saw. Harding found himself out on a limb and climbed down the tree. He withdrew from the race and declined the nomination for lieutenant governor, which was offered him.

Cost Harding Chief Prize. That cost him the chief prize, for Herrick was defeated, but the republican candidate for lieutenant governor was elected. Then Gov.-elect Paterson died and the man who had taken Harding's place on the ticket succeeded to the governorship. In 1910 Harding was defeated for election as governor, because the wave of progressivism came jointly with quarrels in the republican party. "I want my enemies in the republican party to be consulted as well as my friends," he told a close associate at this time. "They are all republicans."

"That's ghastly nonsense, Warren," said the unreconstructed friend. "Treat 'em rough. Success is the great South American politics."

harmonizer. If you win they will all be for you, anyhow, and if you lose it doesn't matter." "Pooh," said Harding. "That's

STEERAGE TRIP RECALLED BY SECRETARY WILSON

Labor Head Tells Immigrants of His Coming to America From Scotland.

NEW YORK, August 30.—Inspired by a group of immigrant boys singing "America," William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, who was the guest of honor at a concert given at Ellis Island for detained immigrants, made a patriotic speech, which brought him an ovation.

"From the audience," Mr. Wilson's words were conveyed to non-English-speaking auditors by interpreters. Addressing the audience as "my fellow immigrants," Mr. Wilson said: "I shall never forget that day, September 8, 1870, when I came to America as a migrant boy to America. I came from Scotland, and in the steerage, just as most of you have come."

The speaker described how he had started work as a pit boy in the Pennsylvania coal mines and made his way, step by step. He explained the working of the United States government and the significance of the Constitution.

"A great country like ours must of necessity safeguard the health of its people," Secretary Wilson said; "for that reason we cannot admit those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with contagious diseases. Neither can we admit those with criminal records or criminal tendencies. Any one who comes here with a purpose to advocate the overthrow of our government will be abruptly stopped at these gates and turned back. Even if he has been admitted, and he is found to be an agitator, he will be shipped back overseas."

FRENCH SHUT CONSULATE

PARIS, August 29.—The foreign ministry announces today that M. Terver, French consul in Breslau, who now is in Berlin, will not return to his post until Germany has made reparations for the recent attack on the Breslau consulate.

This suspension of the consulate will react against Germans who require passport visas to go to upper Silesia.
